Biopure has announced the launch of its Biosurgical Graft GRIPS® (Growth Reconstructive Implant and Pharmacokinetic System) for the first time in the United States. Developed using proprietary science, BioGRIPS® (or Biograft®) can be used to stimulate bone growth and control tissue growth, restoring the appearance of bone after a soft tissue surgical excision. “More than half of the adult population will experience bone loss due to an accident or a disease,” said Trevor R. Goddard, President of Biopure. “Many physicians are using Biograft® to help them replace soft tissue that has been lost, and to provide patients that has a reconstructive solution.” BioGRIPS® is produced using Biograft® (a dehydroepiandrosterone, or DHEA, in a lipid emulsion) and a detailed understanding of the pharmacokinetic interactions of DHEA. The science behind Biograft® is proprietary, and has been used in clinical trials for the last three years. It is marketed in Germany and Europe under the European name of Biograft®, and the company has conducted a multi-center, FDA-regulated, double blind, sham controlled, single dose clinical trial evaluating the efficacy of Biograft® for soft tissue augmentation. “This first clinical trial, which supported the potential effectiveness of Biograft®,
